Miss Evangelina Cossio y Cisneros Becomes Mrs. C. C. Carbonnell.

THEY PASS THROUGH RICHMOND

Married in Baltimore by a Washington Minister-Begin Their Trip to Jacksonville Where Lieut. Carbonnell Joins Lee's Staff.

Lasutenant Carlos C. Carbonnell and his bride, whom Richmond still loves as Miss Evangelina Cisneros, passed through this city at 7 o'clock over the Atlantic Coast Line for Savannah and Jacksonville.

Atlantic Coast Index to Jacksonville.

The rumors which had for a month or more been aftoat undenied, of the expected joining of the star-eyed Cuban giri to the galiant aide to General Fitzhugh Lee, received their confirmation yesterday, when Mr. Carbonell and Miss Cieneros, accompanied only by Mrs. John A. Logan and Miss Logan, and Rev. Dr. Bristol, of the Metropolitan church, left Washington on a morning train, and at noon were quietly married at the Hotel Renert, in Baltimore, by the accompanying clergyman. clergyman.
AN OBSTACLE.

The new celebrated pair would have been married in Washington, but met with an obstacle in the rigors of Washington law, prohibiting foreigners from marrying without their being endorsed by the representative of the country in Washington, and, of course, this endorsement could not be procured for Miss Cisneros. Mr. Carbonell is already a citizen of the United tates, and Miss Cisneros has made application for citizenghip, but the time required by law hetween her application and her acknowledgment as an American citizen had not elapsed, so the only thing for the young people to de was to be married out of the Capital City.

Lieutemant and Mrs. Carbonell returned with the party to Washington on an afternoon train, and after arranging a few affairs there took the 2 o'clock train for the South, arriving here at 7 o'clock. A Times reporter boarded the train at Elba and secured a pleasant interview with the Lieutenant and his new made bride.

On the opposite seat sat the little Cuban in a dress of some light material so light and filmy it seemed that it almost rethe enraptured scribe that it was cloth, the enraptured scribe that it was cloth. Pages have been written about this fair Cuban girl—of her grace, of her voice of velvet and of her countenance. But it is in her eyes, the key-note of this facial melody, that there appears a new heaven elody, that there appears a new heaver of sensation for every moment's gazing into their darkly lustre depths.

SHE IS AMUSED.

"No," replied the Lieutenant to a ques-tion, "we will not stop over in Richmond, as at first we contemplated, but will con-tinue on to Savannah, and from there to

This question seemed to amuse the pretty Cuban and she laughed merrily, her soft Spanish phrases in explanation being interpreted by the Lieutenant. But the question of the future residence was a secret of the future, the reporter was given to understand, although for the present, Mrs. Carbonnell will try to keep her husband in view by journeying as the troops journey, and stopping at the nearest convenient point to her husband's headquarters.

Lieutenant Carbonnell will join the command of General Lee on Monday next at Jacksonville.

Company Promoter. MADE FIFTY MILLION IN A YEAR.

Failure of Mr. Hooley, the London

The Most Picturesque Figure in English Speculation Since the Days of Barney Barnato-He Had the Confidence of the Public, LONDON, June 8 .- A receiving order was issued by the Bankruptcy Court this morning against Ernest T. Hooley, the millionaire capitalist and company promoter. The order was issued upon Hooley's own petition.

The bankruptcy of Mr. Hooley caused a sensation here. It fills the papers and is talked of everywhere. His failure caused no surprise among city financiers who held aloof from his ventures since he plunged into a sea of litigation.

The magnitude of Mr. Hooley's operations can be judged by the fact that during the last two years his promoters were capitalized at over $100,000,000. They include seven bicycle companies, headed by Dunlop's, and also the great industrial companies, such as Bovril, Schwepp's Sode and the English Sewing Cotton.

Mr. Hogley used to express contagnit Mr. Hooley used to express contempt for the London Stock Exchange and for city men. He conducted his operations when in London from the Midland Howhen in London from the Midland Ho-tel. An inquiry there to-day elicited the answer that Mr. Hooley with his staff, had left. Mr. Hooley is the defendant in impending lawsuits involving claims of over $2.000,000. The shares of the com-panies promoted by him were but slight-ly affected. Some of them had depre-ciated in value 40 per cent, in the last few months. His connection with seve-ral of these companies ended with their al of these companies ended with their promotion.

Many of the public were favorably impressed with Mr. Hooley's binfiness, as when, at the time of the flotation of the Dunlop company, he said: "I have given £2,000,000 for this business. My price to you is £4.000,000."
The solicitor who presented the petition

The solicitor who presented the petition for a receiving order promised to make interesting revelations. He suggested that the reason for the application was to protect the estate for the cona-fide creditorsagainst the enormous claims of ertain individuals who have been vic-imizing Mr. Hooley. A remarkable consequence of the bankruptcy is that the gold plate communion service that Mr. Hooley presented to St. Paul's Cathedral in June, 1897, must be delivered to the receiver who will wind up the estate, for the law voids all seftle nents made within two years of bank-Mr. Hooley dealt largely in landed es depths in which Barnato first started.

After he had given up the slik mills. Hooley began to dabble in the London stock market, and the first gratification of his wishes was evident at the end of the year when he had made $100,000. After this he left Nottingham permanently behind him and caem to settle in Capel Court. In spite of this move, he always protests that he is a countryman at heart and not a Londoner, confined to the city merely by the necessities of his business.

to the city merely by the necessities of his business.

With the move to London Hooley's business projects were proportionately increased. He was interested only in promoting investments of the largest magnitude. The Dunlop Tire Company sale, which he negotiated in 1896, was one of his most notable deals. He obtained an option on the business for one week at $10,000,000. The company was not willing to sell for any smaller sum. After he had the option, Hooley, who had already made advantageous acquaintances, let his friends know that he was in a deal to buy the property which was offered at $20,000,000 and would certainly prove the financial success of the year. Confidence in Hooley was such that within three days the tire company was handed over to a syndicate that paid $20,000,000 for it. The business associates of the promoter were not used to disadvantage in the transaction. Hoolto disadvantage in the transaction. Hooley, to be sure, got it at $10,000,000 and sold for twice that sum. But the invest-sold it for twice as much the next day and satisfied the buyers, who got a good investment for their money. It was the confidence in Hooley's judgment that enabled him to secure capital so quick-ly. The public belief that he sold only operties that were certain fields of offitable investment was the secret of his phenomenal success. His good for-tune was for several years connected with the bicycle business. The Swedish Tube Company, formed when the bicycle craze was at its height, to supply paymatic tires, was formed through Hooley's perception of the deand that was certain to arise for pneumatic tires, and out of this the promoter made $5,000,000.

The public was apparently willing to invest in his projects at any time. It used to be said of him in London that so soon as he said he had bought something for a certain price, but wanted to sell it at twice that amount the British public rushed in to help him do it. But that was founded on confidence in the value of the properties he sold.

He occupied the entire floor of a large London hotel, and his offices several years ago, when his fame was at its height, were hesieged by persons trying to persuade him to undertake "to pro-mote" various objects which they pos-sessed. Hooley's charities were on a large scale and his expenditures on a most extravagant basis. Believing in English real estate, which has been sold at very low prices, he has purchased most of the low prices, he has purchased most of the market within recent years. He boasts that none of his investments were of properties about which he was ignorant. He had never dealt in mines beause he knew nothing about them, and his transactions were, according to his own accounts, undertaken only after a thorough personal study of their char-acteristics and conditions.

He had proposed many schemes for improving the condition of the laboring classes in England, and at one time stood for Parliament. He owned a large sheep for Parliament. He owned a large sheep farm and was the largest breeder of sheep in England. He owned town and country residences three yachts, and paid $1.000 a week fo rihe rent of his offices. He used to say that he got to bed at 10 o'clock and was at his office by $8.

One of his latest schemes was the purchase of Cuba by a company, and agents came to this country in the interests of the scheme. Hooley was at the height of his prominence in 1895. His yachts were the Britannia, purchased from the Prince of Wales in January last, and the Varenia, bought from the Earl of Louis-Varenia, bought from the Earl of Lous-dale.—New York Sun.

TO CUT THE CABLE.

It had been the intention to send the cruiser Marbiehead and the cable steamer east to Guantanamo to cut the cable at that point, word having been brought that the Spanish fleet evidently was in communication with Madrid. The ships were to leave at mid-night, but a subsequent order delayed the matter. In the meantime the Spanish seemed to be profiting greatly by the delay. On Sunday morning the fleet lay outside the harbor, a quiet, immobile looking lot of innocents, ready to fight at a moment's notice. At half past 10 o'clock a tug boat bearing a flag of truce was seen by the lookout on the lowa to be steaming down the entrance. Grasping the situation immediately Captain Bob Evans, commander of the battleship lowa, started out in a boat to meet the tug, at the same time instructing the officers in charge to go as close as possible to the mouth of the harbor as to see where the Merrimac was sunk and if her hull was successfully blockading the harbor entrance.

They were politely informed that they had been decelved by the awning over the foretop and that the American fleet had no occasion to send up flags of truce. The Spanish tug then returned to the harbor.

WILL-O'-THE-WISP.

Attention was called to the fictitious story to the effect that the auxiliary cruiser St. Paul, with Captain Sigsbee on board, had first located Cervera's fleet here. There is absolutely no foundation for such a yarn. The scouts did not arrive off Santiago until twelve hours after Commodore Schley and his squad-

Guahan Islands to Establish One.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—The Evening Post will say to-day that the cruiser Charleston will not go to the Philippine Islands immed loately but that her destination is the Island of Guahan, in the Ladron group, which are controlled by the Spanish, and which are about 1,500 miles from Manila and 3,500 from Honolulu. The chief city of Guahan is exceedingly well fortified for such a small place and affords one of the best hariand coaling stations in the Pacific.

The Charleston, the Post continues, was ordered to wait at Honolulu for the first fleet of transports that left the city and to take the ships to the Ladrones. It is asserted that the artillery which have to the Police was really intended. It is asserted that the artillery which went on the Peking was really intended to garrison the fortifications at Guanhan and that after quiet is restored and the islands are under the control of the United States the Charleston will, with the transports, go to Manila.

It is said that the Monadock will be sent to the Guanhan Islands as a permanent guardian for the United States.

In endeavoring to apprehend the two miscreants, the sentinel who challenged them was struck on the head by a bar of fron in the hands of a hidden ally and seriously injured. The news of the affair did not become known until to-day.

About half-past 2 o'clock on the morning of the 25th the sentry on the parapet of the Tenth Battery heard a suspicious noise in the direction of the magazine, and on creeping up to the house saw two men trying to file the locks. He challenged them, but they ran, and although fired at managed to escape, one of the men sending a shot through the sentry pursued the two nen, and Went to Battle Unarmed.

While they were in camp, before the battle of Murfreeshoro, the Forty-fourth Mississippi Regiment, more familiarly known among the men as Blythe's brigade, was separated from the camp on account of the measles. In order to equip recruits, that were constantly coming in, with the sorely needed guns, the Forty-fourth was practically disarmed, the intention being to any them? later the intention being to arm them? later with guns expected from the rear. About this time the Federals began the movement from Nashville which brought on the celebrated battle at Murfreesboro. and when the brigade was ordered into and when the origane was ordered into position an effort was hastily made to arm the Forty-fourth, who had now recovered their health, with the old smooth-bore muskets. These the regiment flatly declined to have, and were then told that they would have to go into the fight without arms. This they did and when the order to charge was did, and when the order to charge was did, and when the order to charge was given went yelling and bare-handed across the field, but as soon as a fallen foe—or friend, either—was spied, he was promptly relieved of his gun and accourtements. So that by the time the battle was over the men were nearly all well armed with new Springfield rifles.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.
